

Five Reasons to Use EG Managed Services

With managed services (MS), experts handle the support that keep your firm running—including labor-intensive departments such as the mailroom and document management, shipping and receiving, transportation and custodial services. Here are five of the reasons you should rely on MS for your organization.

1 You save money.

Managed services are all about keeping your costs down, all of your systems running at peak efficiency, and boosting profits. By outsourcing key departments to an outside provider, you not only save money, you get added budgetary flexibility; you can add or reduce services as your needs evolve. Your managed services provide can even help you quantify your results with reports on monthly trends, quarterly and annual business reviews, SLAs and SOP yearly reviews.

2 You get the best people.

A managed services provider puts highly skilled people to work for your company. They build teams, manage internal processes through a dedicated on-site manager, and implement all services seamlessly. As you manage the business-critical aspects of your operation, you have the confidence that everything else is being handled by top talent.

3 You reduce risk.

Your managed services staff handles all of the critical details—even providing customized reporting, change management, and quality control—of your non-core services. Plus, MS personnel stay abreast of all the latest technologies, labor laws, and business methods. This dramatically reduces your risk of missing an opportunity or a new regulatory requirement.

4 You boost efficiency.

When you use managed services, your top talent is freed to focus on achieving your business goals. Meanwhile, highly experienced outside personnel maximize your investment in your non-core services. The result: your entire enterprise runs more efficiently.

5 You get something rare: peace of mind.

Managed services providers find and hire the right people; assign a dedicated on-site manager who is trained to engage and motivate people; and continuously consult with your personnel to optimize equipment, processes and outcomes—down to the last detail.
