

Why You Should Job Search with a Staffing Agency

Personal Career Coach

Your recruiter will work with you one-on-one to go over what type of position you're looking for, get to know your likes and dislikes about previous jobs you've had, and will help you make sure your resume or work history is error-free before sending it on to the hiring managers.

Access to More Employers

Using a staffing agency to find a job will also help get your resume in front of more employers – some you might not have even known were hiring! Recruiters work closely with the companies they send people to so they always have the latest insight on available positions at companies you'd be interested in working for.

Recruiters can send your resume to multiple employers at once. This saves you a lot of time in your job search since you won't have to take the time to apply to each position separately.

Have Greater Opportunities for Job Flexibility

Often, second shift pay rates have a premium on them to attract workers. Many companies will add a "shift differential" to your base rate.

Staffing Agencies are Free

Another benefit you should consider for finding a job through a staffing agency is that you get all the above benefits at no cost to you! Working with a staffing agency and recruiter is completely free to all applicants. You'll gain a recruiter as your job search ally, your resume in front of more hiring eyes and in front of more companies, and job change flexibility at no cost.
